

Antigua. We expanded into wireless internet technology in the days when there was no Wi-Fi. A company in Virginia built an antenna product that was used to extend the Wi-Fi signal to go up to six miles while allowing more speed than the wire technology. ACT was the first in the region to build and provide this high-speed wireless internet technology with coverage of over 70 percent of the island. At present, Wi-Fi access points are situated on the electric poles and other strategic locations, which allow visitors to experience high speed Wi-Fi internet access on the go."

Today, ACT has grown into the island's largest, single source technology provider. "We sell every aspect of technology from the PC to the software, from power to switching, from cabling to internet access, from sales to after-sales support. ACT even provides the training that is required to fulfill this demand," Doumith says. "We provide analysis, design, and installation of all computer technology products and services. For example, we will analyze your drawings of a new building or an existing building, and design the infrastructure for the network cabling, Central UPS, and power distribution. We will design and install a cutting-edge data center while providing you with the cooling and UPS backup power, complemented with the servers, storage, and data security solutions, with a 24/7 support systems. ACT provides end-to-end solutions."

ACT is Antigua's Business Partner with many well-known prestigious companies, including Microsoft, IBM, APC, Hewlett-Packard Enterprise, HP Inc., Newgen Software, HID, Lenovo and others. "About three years ago, we teamed up with IBM to offer solutions to companies, banks, and the government in the areas of security and analytics. Hence, we are able to deliver expertise to our clients," Doumith states. ACT's headquarters are located on Old Parham Road. This facility
